Maribeth Brown

Practice Advisor

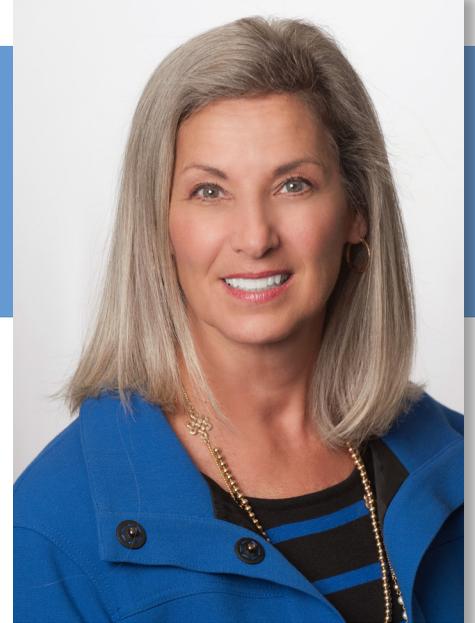

Wisdom in every aspect of dentistry.

Raised as the daughter of a dentist, her first experience in the dental office as a young girl was helping with every job possible. Her first full-time position was as a dental assistant, a career that lasted for over twenty-one years.

She went on to train new dental assistants as the director of her own dental assisting school and then into the management of multiple practices.

For over ten years she has coached, trained and helped dental practices across the country reach new levels of productivity as a Practice Advisor with the Total Patient Service Institute.

She dedicates time each year to dental humanitarian expeditions to third world countries. She is an avid gardener who enjoys an occasional motorcycle ride with her boyfriend of thirty-three years who also happens to be her husband, Dave! They are the proud parents of two boys who they have successfully launched into professional careers of their own.

Maribeth was what I needed to open my new practice in Dallas. She was attentive to every detail from hiring team members to equipment and supplies. There was no task too small for Maribeth. She even helped decorate my favorite Zen room. She was my right and left hand in getting the practice ready for patient service. The practice was up to speed in as little as 3 months and very productive. Maribeth made a very difficult process seamless and enjoyable with training of the entire team. Maribeth has fun while working. She truly enjoys helping others accomplish their goals.

—Michele Williams, DMD – Addison, Texas

“Maribeth possesses excellent leadership qualities and excels at getting the most out of her group through positive reinforcement. I witnessed our overall team morale improve as it expanded in size and productivity. The department worked harder, and became more efficient and exceeded company goals. My experience working with her was very positive and I truly believe she is an invaluable asset to any company.
